

ABSTRACT

[0033] A method of fabricating complementary metal oxide semiconductor (CMOS) field effect transistors which includes selective doping and full silicidation of a polysilicon material comprising the gate electrode of the transistor. In one embodiment, prior to silicidation, the polysilicon is amorphized. In a further embodiment, siliciding is performed at a low substrate temperature.